Rural Merchants And Chain Stores

Much has been said and is now being said, against the rural patronage of mail order houses, of patronizing the home town merchant, etc., but very little attention has been paid to a new competitor which the rural merchant must now face right in his own town, and that is the chain grocery store, of which many thousands have been established throughout the country.

These stores, it is true, can undersell the local store keeper on some articles for the reason that often times certain articles are purchased by the carload lots, and thus bought at a price that the home merchant could not get from his wholesaler.

Another thing, is that the trade of these chain stores is strictly cash and they always have the ready cash to work with, but not so with the local merchant. He is asked to "charge it" with the result that he has thousands of dollars on his books and he must have a good strong working capital back of him to be able to carry on and pay his wholesaler as bills come due in 30 days.

The chain stores are virtually in the same class as the mail order house. They are no benefit to the rural community. These chain stores do not own any local property, pay no local taxes and do not contribute one cent toward the up building of a community, but take every cent they can out of it. Every cent received by these chain stores goes out of the community to the city and none of it is spent locally.

It there is a drive on for funds for the benefit of a church, lodge or any community enterprise, the chain stores do not contribute a cent. Local managers cannot make a donation unless they do so out of their own pocket which they will not do, and the headquarters of the chain stores do not care to donate either. But—the local merchant is ever ready to donate time and cash for the upbuilding of his community.

If the local merchant had a cash trade he could sell much cheaper. The chain store has no bad debts to contend with, has no collections to make and has easy sailing on a cash basis. It is a fixed rule of chain stores not to extend any credit, and if a manager is caught violating this ruling he is summarily fired.

If people would only stop and think these things thru, they would soon see that they are abusing the local merchant without reason. As said before, the chain stores own no property. If the business done in a community does not come up to a certain stipulated amount, they simply close up shop and move over night, but not so with the hometown merchant. He owns his property and if business does not come up to standard, he keeps on plugging, even at a loss, and if things come to worse, he cannot pack up over night and go elsewhere, but must either sell out or go into bankruptcy.

The rural merchants are now managing to fight the chain store competition by way of collective buying which enables them to meet chain store competition. Many of the country town merchants are now able thru this method to put on specials every week that are just as economical and of as good a brand, if not better, than many of the chain stores carry. Before downing your local merchant and boosting a mail order house and chain store, consider a few of the points outlined above.

Mayor Funk to Pitch First Ball

Sunday will be opening day at Tinley with Posen as the opponent. Playing on an improved diamond, manager Selby Hirsch will present a formidable, inspired nine on the field.

Mayor Wm. Funk will pitch the first ball. The game will start at 3 o'clock day-light saving time.

A week from Sunday the Chicago Bucaroos will play at Tinley. On May 20 Midlothian plays a return game at Tinley. Boost your home town team by attending these games.

Orland Park Water Mains Extended

The water main system of Orland Park is to be extended from Beacon street to Keane avenue, east of the village. The contract for this job has been awarded to Pronger Bros., of Blue Island for $4,028.50. The contractors expect to finish the job in forty days.

Mokena to Vote on New School May 19

A special election will be held May 19 in and for school district 159, Mokena, for the purpose of voting upon the following propositions: To authorize the Board of Directors of school district 159 to build a new school house on the site heretofore selected and now owned by said school district located at Division, Third and Carpenter streets, Mokena.

To authorize the Board of Directors of School District No. 159 to issue bonds to the amount of $29,000 to bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, payable semi-annually and to mature $1,000 on June 1 in each of the years 1932 to 1937 inclusive; $2,000 June 1 in each of the years 1938 to 1947 inclusive, and $3,000 on June 1, 1948.

The election will be held at the Mokena village hall and the polls will be open at twelve o'clock noon and will close at seven o'clock P. M.

The last legislature enacted a law granting an increase of the bonding power of the school districts to five per cent, but the act will be invalidated by July first and the bonding power reduced to 2½ per cent, consequently the Mokena school board is desirous of getting the above proposition thru under the present act which will enable them to raise again as much money for building purposes than can be done after July first. It is said that the school taxes will not be any higher than at present if the issue passes. The Mokena school tax rate is $1.37½ cents which is the limit for the present.

Plans for a new school will be considered after the bond issue is passed. The school board consisting of Richard Hensel, Elmer Cooper and Ona McGovney visited a number of schools with architects last week in adjoining communities, and will again this week visit schools in various towns among which will be the Coal City school in Grundy County.

Orland Board Asks County Action In Abduction Case

The recent abduction case in Orland Park in which a young girl was dragged off the street into a car with four men and after a hot fight in which her clothes were nearly torn from her was thrown from the car, is receiving quite a good deal of attention.

Who the assailants of the girl has not been disclosed as yet and even the much suspicion has been aroused no direct proof has been established it is said.

The Orland Park village council at their last meeting recommended that the matter be called to the attention of the office of the states' attorney of Cook county, but so far no action has been taken and no explanation has been made as to why the matter has not been pushed further.

It is understood that the case may yet bring forth some startling developments.

In a recent article on this case it was stated that Barney Homering of Orland Park had discovered that a car had been driven south from the corner where the girl had been thrown out of her abductors car but Mr. Homering states he has no knowledge of the case and is not to be connected with it in any way whatsoever.

Much Road Activity Around Orland

There is considerable activity going on in road building about Orland Park. Pronger Bros., of Blue Island have a big steam shovel at work west of Orland Park cutting down the hill at the end of the paving on 143rd street. The paving is to be continued to connect with Wolf Road west of Orland Park. On Wolf Road much excavating and filling work has been done, in some places hills have been cut down 10 feet and fills made 8 feet high. Several new concrete culverts have already been finished, while a number of others yet remain to be built. No paving work has been begun as yet.

Don't Miss the Wannemacher Sale

Commencing May 12 and continuing to May 18 there will be a special sale at Wannemachers, Mokena. Be sure and get in on these bargains.

Tinley Lions Club Favors Cleanup Day

The Tinley Park Lions Club at their meeting Monday night took up the matter of garbage disposal for the village of Tinley Park. Since there is no place to dump rubbish or garbage and the individual property owner must dispose of same as best he can, it was decided to ask the village council to designate a certain day or days and hire a truck to collect and haul this rubbish to some abandoned clay hole of which there are a number in the vicinity of Blue Island.

It is unsightly to have heaps of rubbish piled up near a village as it gives the town an untidy appearance.

The Lions Club of Tinley is seriously considering sponsoring dances with which to raise funds for the furtherance of the club's activities. It is being planned to hold a dance every three months. The matter has been left with the entertainment committee to work out.

Truck Collides With Auto

A bad auto crash occurred near the Palos Park post office Tuesday afternoon when a sedan driven by a woman was run into by a big truck. The lady driver had attempted to turn off 123rd street without a warning sign and the driver of a big truck following close behind could not stop or turn aside to avoid a collision. The sedan was badly smashed but luckily no one was hurt.

Mokena Pavilion Opens Saturday

The Mokena Men's Club are all set for their opening dance at their pavilion in the Cappel Grove south of Mokena, this coming Saturday night. Music will be furnished by Chuck Formento's orchestra.

Orland Park In Line for Gas

Orland Park is next in line for gas service by the Public Service Company. Gas pipe was hauled in last week and the pipes have been distributed along 143rd street where the mains will be laid and from which lateral lines will lead to various parts of town. The residents of Orland Park feel much elated at the prospect of having the comforts of modern gas service. Work on laying the gas mains will start soon. A franchise was granted the Public Service company by the village council over a year ago. Some of the residents have been so anxious for gas service that they selected their gas stoves nearly two years ago.

Orland Park has all the conveniences of a city now. Paved roads, city water, electricity, gas, concrete walks, good school and modern homes.

Rural Pupils Rank High

County Superintendent of schools August Maue, held a final examination for 8th grade pupils at Monee last Thursday, May 3rd.

Several teachers were present. Thirty-two pupils took the examination. Miss Eileen Barlow and Miss Kathryn Woodcock, both pupils from district 156, ranked the highest, each having an average of 90. Miss Angelina Haley of Manhattan, Ill., is the teacher of district 156 school.

Dogs Must Be Muzzled In Tinley

The village board of Tinley Park passed an ordinance Monday night requiring that all dogs in the village limits must be muzzled and all dogs found without a muzzle will be impounded. Dogs who are not redeemed within five days will be shot by the police officer.

The ordinance contains 18 sections and is iron clad. The provisions of the ordinance will be enforced as the village authorities are not taking any chances on dogs biting anyone. The prevalence of rabies has caused the board to take extra precaution against any outbreak of the disease here.

Last winter there was a mad dog scare in Tinley when a stray dog bit several people.

Must Have Permit To Shoot Fireworks

As a result of reckless shooting of fireworks on the streets and sidewalks of Tinley Park last year the village council has passed an ordinance prohibiting the discharge of fireworks on the streets. A permit must first be procured from the village authorities before there can be any public display of fireworks, when the permit is issued the village officers will designate a certain place where they can be shot. No permit will be required for shooting fireworks in a private yard.

Tinley Goes on New Time

The recommendation of the Tinley Park Lions Club that the village adopt the Daylight Saving time was considered by the village board Monday and adopted unanimously so Tinley will go on the new time from now on until next fall. Many Tinley people are employed in Chicago and Blue Island and must work by the daylight saving time, so it was thought best to have the whole town go on the new time.

Tinley Council Designates May 14- 15 Cleanup Days

For the first time in its history, Tinley Park will have an official cleanup day. The Lions Club at the meeting Monday night decided that the village should have a cleanup day as the citizens have no way of disposing of their accumulation of rubbish and garbage and decided to recommend that such a day be arranged for by the village council. The same evening the council was in session and the Lions Club recommendation was presented to the village dads with the result that the board approved the recommendation and has designated May 14 and 15 as official cleanup days for Tinley Park. All the citizens are requested to place their rubbish in boxes or barrels and place same in convenient places in their yards so they can be easily picked up by the cleanup truck which has been engaged by the village board to make the collection. All expenses connected with the hauling of the rubbish will be paid by the village.

Undoubtedly cleanup day will be an annual affair from now on.

Turkey Buzzard An Attraction

Lorenz & Rein of Tinley Park have quite a curiosity in their Linden Garden by way of a turkey buzzard, the only one in captivity in this section of the state. The bird is of good size and its head resembles that of a turkey. The bird was caught near Tinley Park recently after being winged by a hunter. The buzzard is a scavenger bird and a fighter.

Tinley Gets Better Parcel Post Service

Tinley Park has an improvement in its parcel post service. Heretofore the rural carriers had to wait until the milk train brought in parcel post in the morning which always made it late for them to get started on their routes. Postmaster C. Andres took the matter up with the Chicago post office Tuesday and an order was issued immediately that all parcel post be handled direct from Chicago to Tinley Park on train No. 275 arriving here at 7:12 a. m., which means a saving of over an hour's time. Parcel post is now routed direct to Tinley Park instead of being carried thru to Joliet and then brought back on the milk train.

W. R. Schussler Opens Garage

W. R. Schussler has opened an auto show room and garage in the Schussler garage building recently vacated by Hewson & Cowan at Orland Park. Mr. Schussler has the agency for the Willys Knight cars and has cars on display. He is having the show room made very attractive and a private office is being built also. An expert mechanic will be in charge of the repair department. Mr. Schussler conducted a garage at the same place a few years ago.

Marley Has Many Activities

A moving picture program will be given at the Marley church. Friday evening, May 11 a two reel comedy "Silly Sights" and the feature picture is entitled "Tin Gods" starring Thomas Meighan.

On Friday evening, May 18, the Homer Dramatic club will present their Home talent plays at the Marley church under the auspices of the Sunday Evening club. Two plays will be rendered, a one act play entitled "Sham or Imitation" presents the following cast: Robert Jungles as the "Thief"; Nile White as "Charles"; Miss Gladys West as "Clara"; Lee White as "The Reporter". The other play entitled "The Laughing Cure" presents Elmer Rowley "Dr. St. George Carey"; Miss Pearl Wells "Mrs. Laura Hanson"; Mrs. Clarence Rowley "Mary Ellen Perry"; Miss Evelyn Kopelman "Nora"; Edward Ott "Clark Hanson"; Philip Cary "Jimmie Mason"; John Reiter "Dr. Whitcomb"; Miss Dorothy Ott "Kitty Clyde"; Miss Maybelle Reiter "Gay Hanson". Musical numbers will be given between acts. Proceeds will be divided between the two societies to be used for church purposes. The public is invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Haley who have been spending several days at the home of their son Mr.

and Mrs. Harrison Haley and family near Kempton, Ill., returned home Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Haley and sons of Kempton, Ill. were guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marshall.

Mrs. Lewis Tilley returned home Monday from the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where she has been taking treatments.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hampel of Worth who recently returned from Florida, with their grandchildren visited at the Charles W. Lahmann home last week.

Mrs. Sidney Smith and Miss Josie Sharts were joint hostesses at the meeting of the Marley Household Science club Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage. The program was in the nature of a fashion show and the annual business meeting was held, election of officers resulted as follows: President Mrs. Fred E. Blodgett; vice-president Mrs. Jesse O. Marshall; Secretary and treasurer Mrs. Julian Gornham. Refreshments were served to about fifteen guests.

Andrew Lahmann spent the week end at the home of his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lillwitz.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doctor of Orland, Mrs. Henry Tilsy and daughter, Dorothy were visitors recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tilsy.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Farr and son of Chicago moved into the farm house on the Marshall farm east of Marley on Maple Road last week.

E. D. Gillett and son Dwight are spending several days at the Fred W. Holm farm near Worth.

Brief Illness Fatal To Henry Schmuhl

Henry Schmuhl former New Lenox Township resident, died at his home in Joliet, Thursday morning at 4 o'clock following a brief illness. He was taken ill last Saturday.

He is survived by his widow, one son Ervin; five daughters, Mrs. Emil Hinspeter; Mrs. Ismay Parks; Mrs. Laella Titzer; Mrs. Mildred Matt all of Joliet; Mrs. Elsie Sen of Troy, one sister Mrs. Fred Geuther of Frankfort and two brothers, Charles of Joliet and William of Mokena, also a number of grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon with burial in St. John's cemetery, Mokena.

Tinley Defeats Midlothian

Tinley Park defeated Midlothian 16 to 14 Sunday at the latter's field in an exhibition ball game. Veleta pitched good ball for six innings. Wyman and Voss relief hurlers pitched good ball for six innings plentiful on the rough uneven diamond.

When Jackson Killed Dickinson

ANDREW JACKSON

THOMAS HART BENTON

ANDREW JACKSON
From a Painting by Vanderlyn

By ALFRED SORENSON

WHEN Andrew Jackson ventured into Tennessee in 1798 to seek fame and fortune as a lawyer he found that frontier country a vast wilderness. The settlements were few and far between and hostile Indians roamed at large throughout that region. The prospects for a professional man Jackson, but he was by no means discouraged.

Opening an office in Nashville he soon secured a large share of the legal business not only of that town but of the state. He made his home with Mrs. Donelson, who kept a number of boarders, and there he became acquainted with her daughter, who was living apart from her husband, Lewis Robards, a resident of Kentucky. Robards had become jealous of his wife, a beautiful charming woman, and had written to her mother to take her home as he did not intend to live with her any longer. Mrs. Robards' brother was accordingly sent to Kentucky to escort her to Nashville. Robards was censured by his own mother for his action, and he soon regretted what he had done. Shortly after his wife's departure he became convinced that any suspicion that he had entertained regarding her conduct was entirely groundless. Through the efforts of a mutual friend he became reconciled to his wife and was living with her at the time Jackson became a member of the family circle. Within a few months Jackson's courteous and innocent attentions to Mrs. Robards excited the jealousy of her husband, and, this fact becoming known, the result was much unhappiness in the Donelson family.

In the fall of 1799 Robards took steps to secure a divorce under a law of Virginia—whose jurisdiction included Tennessee—providing that a man, convinced of his wife's infidelity, must obtain the passage of an act of the legislature authorizing a grand jury investigation, and a dissolution of the marriage in case the woman should be found guilty.

Robards went before the legislature and charged that his wife had deserted him and was living with Andrew Jackson. Upon this statement the legislature passed the desired act, but Robards failed to proceed in accordance therewith. In the course of time the news of this legislative action was received in Nashville, and it was the general impression that Robards had been decreed a divorce by regular procedure.

Learning in the spring of 1791 that her husband, now divorced as she believed, intended to come to Nashville with a view of compelling her to go with him back to Kentucky, Mrs. Robards decided to avoid him by visiting friends in Natchez. Jackson, whose friendship had now ripened into love, accompanied her thither, and at once returned home. In the summer of the same year he again visited Natchez, married Mrs. Robards, and brought her back to Nashville. The couple received the hearty congratulations of their many friends, and their happiness was not disturbed until two years later when they learned that Robards had not completed his divorce case in Virginia, but had recently revived it in Kentucky and obtained a decree in accordance with the act of the legislature. This was indeed astounding news to Jackson and his wife, but to prevent any further complication they were remarried. Their social standing in Nashville was not lowered in the least by the predicament in which they had found themselves.

Jackson was the owner of a race horse named Truxton which he stood ready at any time to heavily back with his money. In the fall of 1805 a race was arranged between Truxton and Capt. Joseph Ervin's Plow Boy for a stake of $2,000. The stake money was to be put up in personal notes, payable on the day of the race, but just before the race was to be pulled off, Captain Ervin and his son-in-law, Charles Dickinson, a prominent lawyer and a popular young man, paid a forfeit of $800 and withdrew Plow Boy, the affair ending amicably.

A short time after this event Jackson was informed that Dickinson had made some remarks reflecting on the character of Mrs. Jackson. When Dickinson, who frequently indulged in the flowing bowl, was interviewed regarding his aspersions, he told Jackson that if he had made them he must have been drunk at the time. Further explanations seemed to be satisfactory to Jackson, who parted from Dickinson in a friendly manner.

This, however, was not the end of the disagreeable matter. Soon after this meeting, Dickinson, while drinking in the barroom of a tavern, publicly repeated his offensive words, which were carried to Jackson, who thereupon urged Captain Ervin to advise his son-in-law to quit his scandalous talk before it was too late to avoid trouble. From this time the enmity between the two men increased in bitterness.

A report was spread by Thomas Swan, a young lawyer, that Jackson had said that the notes paid as a forfeit in the horse race were different from those agreed upon. Jackson emphatically denied that he had said anything of the kind. Thereupon a voluminous and abusive correspondence ensued between the men. In one of his letters, Jackson said: "There are certain traits that always accompany the gentleman of truth. The moment he hears a harsh expression applied to a friend he will immediately communicate it, that explanation may take place; while the base poltroon and cowardly talebearer will always act in the background. You can apply the latter to Mr. Dickinson and see which best fits him. I write it for his eye, and the latter I emphatically intend for him."

Jackson declared to his face that Swan was no gentleman and that if he dared to issue a challenge he would come him first and then give him satisfaction. Swan, however, sent Jackson a note of defiance in which he demanded "that reparation which one gentleman is entitled to receive from another," and authorized the bearer of the cartel "to make complete arrangements in the field of honor." Jackson did not reply by letter, but answered in person, assailing Swan in a barroom with a pistol and telling him to "draw and defend himself." The fracas, however, ended without bloodshed. Swan's next move was the production of proofs going to show that he was a gentleman, who held himself responsible for whatever he might say. The letter that Jackson had written to Swan, abusing Dickinson, and carrying a threat of a challenge to him, brought a caustic reply from Dickinson, who immediately departed on a trip to New Orleans.

When Dickinson returned from New Orleans he wrote a scurrilous attack upon Jackson, and presented it to a local newspaper for publication. Jackson, upon being informed of this forthcoming assault, called at the newspaper office, and upon demand was shown a copy of the article. He immediately sent a challenge to Dickinson, who had no hesitation in accepting, as he had expected it.

The duel took place May 30, 1806, at a rendezvous some considerable distance from Nashville. Dickinson had the reputation of being the best shot in Tennessee, and was known to have plugged a target the size of a silver dollar four times in succession at a distance of twenty-four feet. The betting odds were much against Jackson, although he was regarded as an expert handler of the pistol.

When the combatants came on the field they appeared to be cool and determined. Jackson bore an ineradicable enmity to Dickinson for the unforgivable slurs that he had cast upon his wife, and Dickinson felt that he himself had been insulted. All arrangements having been completed, they faced each other at twenty-four feet, each holding his pistol downward. At the given word, Dickinson quickly raised his pistol and fired first. A small cloud of dust arose from Jackson's left breast, and lifting up his arm he placed it across his chest for a moment. The witnesses thought he had been hit. But he stood firm, and the next instant took aim and pulled the trigger. The pistol failed to go off. The hammer had stopped at half cock, and while Jackson was recoiling it, Dickinson exclaimed: "My God! Have I missed him!" Again taking steady aim,

Jackson fired the shot that ended the life of his enemy. Dickinson staggered and fell to the ground, the bullet having passed through his body below the ribs, causing him to bleed to death in a few hours.

Shortly after the duel it was noticed that Jackson's shoes were dripping with blood. Dickinson's bullet had struck him in the left side, breaking a rib and scraping the breast. Jackson, although suffering severe pain, had striven to keep his wound a secret in hopes that no one would know that he had been hit. It was not a dangerous injury, and he was soon on the road to recovery.

It was claimed by Dickinson's friends that Jackson had taken unfair advantage by clothing his slender figure in loose garments. They maintained that if he had been dressed in close-fitting clothes, such as he usually wore, Dickinson would have made a sure-death shot. He had aimed at the spot where he supposed Jackson's heart was located, and was surprised that he had not killed him instantly. However, one of the comments regarding this alleged unfairness was that "at any rate Dickinson deserved killing for slandering an upright woman."

For some considerable time this affair militated politically and socially against Jackson. He was a quarrelsome, quick-tempered overbearing man, always carrying "a chip on his shoulder" and ever ready to fight "at the drop of the hat." His affair with the Benton brothers is a fair illustration of his bellicose nature.

Capt. William Carroll, an intimate friend of Jackson, became involved in a quarrel with Jesse Benton, who challenged him. Jackson endeavored to have the affair amicably settled, but Benton would not listen to anything of the kind and demanded a meeting on the "field of honor." Jackson acted as Carroll's second. Benton fired first, and then weakened. He stooped and turned partly around to avoid Carroll's shot which struck him in the rear, inflicting a painful but not serious wound. Thomas Hart Benton, who was in Washington to save Jackson from bankruptcy, upon his return to Tennessee became indignant at Jackson, whom he charged with having conducted the duel in "a savage, unequal and base manner." Jackson responded with a threat that he would horsewhip Benton at their next meeting.

Jackson went on the warpath and trailed Benton to the City hotel and pointing his pistol at him, said: "Now, you d-d rascal, I am going to punish you. Draw and defend yourself." Benton backed away. Jesse Benton now appeared on the scene with his pistol loaded with two bullets and a slug, and shot Jackson in the shoulder and in the left arm. Jackson fell in a helpless condition. Captain Coffee came to his rescue and fired at Thomas Benton, but missed him. Clubbing his pistol he advanced on Benton who stepped backward and fell down a stairway. Jackson's party was at this stage of the fight reinforced by his nephew, Stokely Hayes, who attacked Jesse Benton with a sword cane, the slender blade breaking in pieces upon striking a button. Hayes now drew a dirk, threw Jesse to the floor, stabbed him in the left arm, and inflicted several slight flesh wounds. A bystander separated them, and others interfered and stopped further bloodshed. Thomas Benton, surrounded by a few friends, denounced Jackson as a defeated assassin and defied him to come forth and renew the battle. Picking up Jackson's sword, which had dropped on the floor, he went out to the public square and broke it in two. Jackson never fully recovered from the wound in his shoulder.

Lesson for May 13

JESUS ENTERS JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Mark 11:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; He is just, and having salvation.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Hailing Jesus as King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Hailing Jesus as King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Kingly Qualities of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Asserts Messianic Authority.

1. Jesus Officially Presented to the Jewish Nation as King.—vv. 1-11.

This should not be designated the triumphal entry, for it was so only in outward appearances. The shouts were empty and meaningless. It was the promised King publicly offering Himself to the nation.

1. The preparation (vv. 1-6).

(1) Two disciples sent for the ass (vv. 1-3).

He told them just where to go to find it, and how to answer the owner's inquiry. The providing of this animal was the working out of the divine plan according to Christ's foreknowledge.

(2) Obedience of the disciples (vv. 4-6). Without asking why, they go at His bidding. The command may have seemed strange and unreasonable, but they rendered explicit obedience.

2. The entry into Jerusalem (vv. 7-10).

(1) The disciples put their garments upon the ass and set the Lord upon it (v. 7). This act showed their recognition of Him as their King (II Kings 9:18).

(2) The multitude (vv. 8, 9). Some spread their garments in the way; others who had no garments to spare cut down branches and strewed them in the way, which was just as acceptable unto Him. This entry was in fulfillment of a prophecy uttered some five hundred years before (Zech. 9:9). They uttered the very cry which the prophet foretold. This is a clue to enable one to understand the prophecies which are unfilled as yet. If the prediction of His first coming was thus literally fulfilled, we must believe that those of His second coming will likewise be literally fulfilled. The prediction of Zechariah 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as that of Zechariah 9:9.

(3) The Lord's action (v. 10).

Upon entering the temple, He looked around upon all things; but as it was eventide He withdrew to Bethany with the twelve.

II. Jesus Exercising His Royal Authority (vv. 12-19).

1. The barren fig tree cursed (vv. 12-14).

The fig tree is typical of the Jewish nation. The fruit normally appears on the fig tree ahead of the leaves. The presence of the leaves is the assurance of fruit. This was an acted parable of the Lord's judgment on Israel for pretension of being the chosen people without the fruits thereof.

2. The temple cleansed (vv. 15-19).

For the various sacrifices; in the temple, many oxen, sheep and doves were needed. Many persons came from the distant parts of the land; therefore it was impracticable for them to bring their sacrifices with them, so they brought money and bought the animals needed. This privilege the law had granted to them (Deut. 14:24-26), for the exchange was necessary. When evil men used it as an opportunity for gain it became an offense before God. It defiled His house. Jesus made Himself a scourge of cords and drove out the money changers, overthrowing their tables and pouring out their money. By this act He declared Himself to be the Lord of the temple and one with God. That which God intended to be a "house of prayer for all nations" was made a "den of thieves." This action symbolized the call of the nation to repentance.

III. Jesus' Authority Challenged (vv. 27-33).

They challenged Him to show by what authority He accepted the honors of the Messiah, and who gave Him the authority to cast out the money changers. This seemed to place Jesus in a dilemma. He responded by a question which placed them in a counter dilemma. Since John was His forerunner, the divinity of His commission rested upon that of John. They were powerless to discredit John, because the people accepted him as God's prophet. If they had accepted John's message they would have been prepared to accept His. They weakly confessed that they could not answer the question.

Route to Glory

"He must increase, but I must decrease." This is your route to Glory. Unless He increases in your life and you decrease, your life will be contrary to what He wants it to be. In fact, it will be fruitless. In all things He must have the pre-eminence if you would be fruitful for Him."

Worthy Qualities

A man cannot persistently admire worthy qualities and not eventually partake of them.—Brown.

DON'T suffer headaches, or any of those pains that Bayer Aspirin can end in a hurry! Physicians prescribe it, and approve its free use, for it does not affect the heart. Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby—Babies Have Nerves

By RUTH BRITTAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the over-stimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends. Baby may be played with, but not for more than a quarter of an hour to an hour daily. Beyond that, being handled, tickled, caused to laugh or even scream, will sometimes result in vomiting, and invariably causes irritability, crying or sleeplessness.

Fretfulness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria. It's amazing to see how quickly it calms baby's nerves and soothes him to sleep; yet it contains no drugs or opiates. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper. Leading physicians prescribe it for colic, cholera, diarrhea, constipation, gas on stomach and bowels, feverishness, loss of sleep and all other "upsets" of babyhood. Over 25 million bottles used a year shows its overwhelming popularity.

With each bottle of Castoria, you get a book on Motherhood, worth its weight in gold. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package so you'll get genuine Castoria. There are many imitations.

W. N. U., CHICAGO, NO. 19-1928.

Governor Small is expected to issue a call soon for a special session of the general assembly to consider home rule for Chicago. It may be that other subjects will be included. Announcement that a second special session would be called was made by the governor at Chicago recently. May 15 is the probable date on which the special session will be held. Downstate members of the assembly are urging that the call contain a provision for legislation by which counties may receive their share of money paid under the invalid gasoline tax.

Immediate construction of a dairy cattle exposition pavilion and six dairy cattle barns on the Illinois state fair grounds has been decided. The total appropriation for the improvement is $250,000. The decision was reached after Governor Small, a dairy cattle breeder and exhibitor, in company with fair officials and consulting authority, made a tour of the fair grounds and marked out the location of the modern buildings. The department of purchases and construction will execute designs and give specific details of construction. The state's chief architect, William J. Lindstrom, with tentative plans in accordance with ideas of fair officials, accompanied the party and gave solutions to the architectural problems involved. The six barns planned will be identical in construction. They are to be of brick and steel—along the lines of buildings recently erected at the exposition grounds. They will bear out the policy of the present state administration to build for the future as well as for the present.

With diphtheria prevalence running 25 per cent heavier this year than for this season last year, Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director, has issued a statement pointing out that preventive campaigns have been confined too largely to school children in spite of the fact that it is the younger group that suffers worse from this disease. Approximately one hundred thousand children were immunized against diphtheria last year in Illinois but a large percentage of these were of school age. To date this year there have been 2,630 cases of diphtheria reported against 2,007 for the corresponding period in 1927. "The practice of immunizing school children against diphtheria is all right," said Doctor Rawlings, "and should continue, but we cannot hope to eradicate the disease while confining our efforts largely to that group. Over two-thirds of all deaths from diphtheria occur among school children under school age. This being the case, it is plain that the immunization of children under six years of age will result in the larger saving of life."

Many millions of the seven and three-fourths billion dollars spent annually for building construction in this country are wasted by the American public through lack of plans, according to Prof. W. A. Foster, building authority of the farm mechanics department, college of agriculture, University of Illinois. Unwise use of materials unsuited to the climate, environment and location, waste of materials used and labor required in fabrication, and, finally, a finished structure that is unsuited to its occupants or the products sheltered, all contribute their share to the million-dollar price on inadequate plans, he pointed out. In a short time such structures are razed to be replaced with buildings which meet the requirements set forth for them.

Chicago's high school bandmen were acclaimed at the fifth annual state band contest when two of its representatives, Nicholas Senn high school and De La Salle institute, were awarded first and second place. Senn captured first place when it repeated its title winning performance of 1927 and won the right to represent Illinois in the national high school band contest at Joliet in May.

Mrs. H. W. White of Carthage has been chosen by acclamation and without contest as president of the Illinois council of the Parent-Teacher association, or as it will be known hereafter, the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. Five hundred and nineteen delegates attended the meeting held recently at Streator.

Attorney General Carlstrom has given an opinion in which he holds that judges and clerks of election who served at the primary on April 10 are entitled to only one day's pay, but those who serve at the general election in November will receive pay for two days.

A Lincoln head in stucco, on a plaque of oak, artistically molded and mounted by Rocco Bartoldo, of Decatur, is on display in the office of S. J. Stanard, director of the state department of agriculture. Bartoldo has executed several other similar designs. Some months ago a bust of Governor Len Small, from the skilled hand of this Decatur artist, was presented to the chief executive and is on display at his farm home at Kankakee. He has created two of the Great Emancipator, and one of George Washington.

Large tracts of Kenesaw mountain and adjacent lands in Georgia will be converted into a huge national park, according to plans now being developed by the federal government. Illinois has a monument on the scene. The legislature of Illinois in 1911 made an appropriation of $20,000 for the erection of a monument on the battlefield to the memory of the Illinois soldiers who took part in the battle of Kenesaw mountain and were killed on June 27, 1864, during the Civil war. In 1914 the monument was unveiled and dedicated in the presence of Governor Dunne and members of the Kenesaw Memorial association.

A warning to Illinois farmers to guard against stocking poor animals during the wave of dairy cow buying now sweeping the state, has been sounded by C. S. Rhodes, dairy extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. Conditions have been favorable for dairying during the past few years, and as result farmers throughout southern Illinois and the great mixed farming section are rapidly developing this phase of the business, he reported. Many poor cows are finding their way into the large shipments being made into the state, he said, as a result of this big demand.

Compilation of figures on the coal production in Illinois during the month of March show that Franklin county's 16 mines, in operation during that month, hoisted almost one-third of the entire state output. The state production is given at 7,147,830 tons, and of this amount Franklin county produced 1,981,277 tons.

Contracts for the construction of four stretches of pavement and three bridges have been awarded by the state division of highways as follows:

Route 172, section 128, Pike county, pavement; to Darrow and Barron, Waukegan, $162,527.29.
Route 43, section 118B, Champaign county, bridge; to V. L. Peters, Homer, $11,858.95.

Dipping is the only practical method for eradicating sucking or biting lice from sheep and goats. Spraying and fumigation are effective and practical only under unusual circumstances. Dusting powders applied by hand are sometimes of value in holding the parasites in check in winter when the weather is too cold for dipping, according to Leaflet 13-L, "Sheep and Goat Lice," just published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The year 1927 marked an improvement in highway safety records for ten states of the Union, with the greatest numerical reduction in motor fatalities occurring in Illinois. In Illinois the number of fatalities in motor traffic accidents dropped from 1,776 in 1926, to 1,647 in 1927, a decrease of 7 per cent, as shown by a street traffic bulletin received at A. A. headquarters from the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Separate ballots must be used when tax propositions are submitted at elections, otherwise the levying of the proposed tax, even if it is approved by the voters, is illegal, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. By violating this rule, Bellflower township, McLean county, cannot enforce its oil tax. Ballots on which the issue was printed also contained names of township candidates.

Illinois will have 67 agricultural fairs during 1928. One of the big ones is the Southern Illinois fair at Anna.

Mrs. Isabelle Landry, who sang a little French song for Abraham Lincoln 76 years ago, thereby earning a bag of candy from the future President, celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday at her home in Aurora a few days ago. The song was sung in an old-fashioned country store in Aurora where the ten-year-old Isabelle stood bare-footed on a counter before an audience consisting of the store proprietor, a local judge and Mr. Lincoln. Lincoln complimented Isabelle after the performance and gave her a pound of horehound drops, her favorite candy.

NEW DRAPERIES for A FEW CENTS By Mae Martin

All of us realize nowadays how bright-colored draperies seem to invite people in, and how warm touches of color in spreads, cushions and runners help to make us love our own surroundings.

No woman need deny herself these touches of cheer, because they can easily be had at the expense of a few cents and a little planning. Curtains that are faded or drab in color can be made bright and pleasing with a package or so of Diamond Dyes. Then spreads, covers, runners, etc., can be tinted or dyed to match. Anyone can do it. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. Brilliant new colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond dyes give true, fadeless colors. They are the kind of dyes used when the cloth was made. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for beautifying your home and clothes. Sixty-four pages, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE. Just write Mae Martin, Home Service Department, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Woman Maker of Stone

Mrs. Ann Greaves, the only woman member of the Institute of Quarrying in England, has perfected a process for making artificial stone. At a recent meeting of the institute she declared that she can produce the stone at one-third the cost of real stone and claimed that it could be worked with hammer and chisel.

Don't defy public opinion. Best one can do is to discreetly ignore it.

Tablet for Grave of

Famous Lady Godiva

Of the fair Lady Godiva, the most romantic feminine figure in English legend, every child has heard, but how many who are grown up could say where she is supposed to be buried?

The lovely wife of Leofric, earl of Mercia and lord of Coventry, died probably shortly before 1085 and was buried in a porch of the Benedictine Abbey church, which stood on Hill top, Coventry, and by which, it is most probable, she passed that day when she rode unclothed through the ancient city to obtain the people's relief from the burdensome toll imposed by her hard-hearted husband.

On that spot now stands 8 Priory row, the offices of the Coventry insurance committee, and in order that the unique historic interest of it may definitely be fixed an appeal is being made for funds for a commemorative bronze tablet.

Machinery Has Freed Women From Drudgery

It is a fascinating topic to debate whether man lives up to his inventions, or whether his inventions follow him. One can argue forever to prove that women today are better educated and more intelligent, because it is necessary for them to know how to manage the electrical equipment which confronts them in both industrial and domestic life, or to prove that the electrical equipment has provided the opportunity to develop the use of their heads instead of their hands alone. It is of small importance what the answer is. The fact remains that homes are more charming places in which to live, offices are more attractive places in which to work, and women are more interesting human beings, because electrical machinery has come into existence to do the body-breaking mind-destroying routine tasks, which for so many years constituted woman's entire field of endeavor.—Exchange.

ORLAND PARK

The pupils of Mrs. H. Adele Cooper will give a recital Wednesday evening, May 16 at 7:15 standard time at the Orland Park M. E. church.

The Orland Park baseball team is giving a dance this Saturday night at Hadock's near Lemont. The club is also getting out an advertising booklet and score sheet for the purpose of raising funds with which to purchase new suits for the team.

Last Saturday the Junior Boy Scouts under the leadership of Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the M. E. church visited the Field Museum in Chicago and a fine time is reported.

Mrs. R. Helenhouse who has been at the home of her daughter in Blue Island during a recent siege of illness, returned home last week. She is somewhat improved.

Mayor W. R. Schussler was in conference with Anton Cermak, president of the Cook county board of commissioners Tuesday in connection with the Southwest highway.

The Orland Park Woman's Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Arnold last Thursday. Bunco was played and the prize winners were: Mrs. Bertha Hahenlein, first; Mrs. Susie Gray, consolation. The next meeting will be at the home of Harriett Gee next Thursday.

Ben Haus is having his home redecorated, Chas. Hahenlein doing the papering, painting and varnishing work.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Orland Park M. E. church has been invited to attend the Community Church Conference to be held at Mountain Lakes, New Jersey next week. He has been assigned to give an address on the topic "The Church and the Community".

The Inter-Community Training School which has been held at Orland during the latter part of the winter, has closed a very successful period. Much interest was shown and the attendance was good. Last Tuesday the members of the school wound up the season's work with a picnic in the Forest Preserve on the outskirts of the village. The picnic was held in the evening around a big cherry campfire. A supper was cooked and a delightful social time was enjoyed.

Some of the holes in the village streets have been filled in with cinders.

The village board will meet next Monday night.

The Euclid Golf Club has a big force of men and teams at work preparing the course for the summer. John Habenicht is in charge of the work.

Widening the Telephone Horizon

IN THE memory of many now living, Alexander Graham Bell predicted that the day would come when we could talk to other countries, even across wide expanses of water.

Bell's vision was made a reality when in 1926 America and England spoke together in two way conversation. Since then, this service has been opened to the public between any point in the U. S. A. and Great Britain. Mexico has been brought into speaking distance. Important cities of continental Europe have come within our voice horizon.

Even more important, the Bell System in the United States now embraces 18,500,000 telephones—a growth for the past year of more than 750,000.

This is measurable progress in widening America's telephone horizon.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Worship Service 9:15 A. M. Glen T. Beatty, Pastor, Sunday School 10:30 A. M.

The Sunday morning service will be devoted to the Mother's Day thought. We invite all to come in honor of their mother and to bring the mothers of our community to some church service in some church Sunday. The pastor will preach.

A goodly group of people greeted the opening morning service at 9:15 a. m. last Sunday and all seemed to rejoice in the early service. This is an experiment in trying to meet the religious needs of our people during the late spring and summer months. If at the end of a month's trial, we find that more are served than by the evening service in the spring and summer, we will continue until September. Come and help us make this service a real success.

Fred Leonhardt, local shoe man has been ill the past week in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Philip Hacker.

Elmer Lehnert has been awarded the job to haul the village rubbish for $25. August Hentsch also had a bid in for $35.

Mrs. Joe Sandrock has returned to her home in Three Rivers, Mich. She has been a guest of Mrs. Chas. Bock for the past three weeks.

MEDICAL GROUP OF U. OF I. NEEDS BUILDINGS

Professional Departments at Chicago Need More Space for Instruction.

Relief from handicaps for the Chicago Departments of the University of Illinois—Medicine, Dentistry and Pharmacy—caused by inadequate buildings and facilities is hoped for by the members of the medical profession and citizens of the state in general.

Adequate facilities for the clinical teaching of medicine are greatly curtailed by the lack of sufficient number of beds in the Research hospital.

The instructional work in the first two years in the College of Medicine and in all of Dentistry is conducted in two old buildings situated in the block directly north of Cook County hospital.

These buildings are antiquated in design with absolutely no fire-proofing construction and of a character not at all adapted to the methods of modern laboratory instruction. Aside from these facts the old buildings are two blocks away from the rest of the plant, which causes the loss of a certain degree of efficiency in the conduct of the work.

It is hoped that the state will soon provide laboratories sufficient in size to handle incoming classes of at least 200 students in the College of Medicine and 100 students per class in the College of Dentistry. Entrance in medicine has been limited for a number of years and thus many of the young men and women of the state of Illinois desiring medical education either had to wait twelve months in order to be admitted to the University of Illinois College of Medicine or else enter other medical schools.

Always... a square USED CAR deal from the Buick Dealer

The Buick dealer is in business to stay. His future reputation depends upon his treating used car buyers fairly.

He wants to please used car purchasers because he knows that satisfied used car customers are prospective new Buick buyers.

The man who buys a good used car—honestly represented—at a fair price—receives splendid value in transportation.

In his enthusiasm for the car he has bought, and the value he has received, it is only natural for him to look upon the dealer as his friend.

The Buick dealer has many such friends because he represents the true condition of the used cars he offers for sale.

And that is good business—for the Buick dealer, as well as the used car buyer.

THE RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent returns to New York after nearly four years' absence. Once known as the master criminal, Trent is going straight. The pursuer accuses Trent of jumping overboard from the Potomac at Liverpool, but is disappointed when Trent shows no surprise. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. At New York Trent is startled to find somebody occupying his house. The stranger is Sutton Campbell, the brother of his best friend, who is serving ten years in prison. Trent is asked by Campbell Sutton to force Payson Grant to a written confession, having crookedly obtained all of Captain Sutton's possessions and later married his wife. Trent, after long hesitation, consents. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Payson Grant. He learns from an old friend, Clarke, that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing, and also learns that Captain Sutton has no brother.

"Wait!" Campbell Sutton cried anxiously. It was an anxiety dictated by fear of physical punishment, Trent decided. He was maddened by the remembrance of the many confidences he had made to this man who had gained his shelter under false pretenses. "Put up your hands," Trent cried. Then he hit him with the strength and skill of the trained boxer.

His powerful left landed squarely on the nose of his opponent, on that proud and high-arched nose which reared itself arrogantly from the yellow and unhealthy face. Never had his hand telegraphed such a queer sensation to its directing brain. The impression was that of hitting something soft and pliable, something that distinctly was not of the osseous character of the bridge of the human nose.

Too astonished to follow up the blow, he glanced at his knuckles. Adhering to them was a material like putty and a yellow greasy stain. He did not even attempt to stop the man who had called himself Campbell Sutton when he fled along the passage and locked the door of the bathroom.

The masquerader had a false face as well as a false name! He would probably be driven to desperate measures now. The bathroom barricade could not be held indefinitely. The situation was rather absurd. Was he to break in the bathroom door and run the risk of being shot through the panels, or sit waiting until sleep or hunger acted as his allies?

Trent rapped on the door, standing aside from it so that no shot could hit him.

"Wait," said the voice. "I'll be out in a minute if you'll promise to talk this over before attacking me."

"All right," Trent said.

A few minutes later he heard the bathroom door unlatched. Firm steps came along the corridor. Anthony Trent looked up to see the face of his old adjutant, Captain Sutton, peering through the door. Sutton stood there a moment in doubt of his reception.

"Trent," Sutton said, "I owe you a thousand apologies."

"Yes," Trent said, without smiling. "I think you do."

It was the Captain Sutton he had known so well with very slight physical changes. Now that the disfiguring grease-paint and built-up nose had gone there was the same kindly face and shrewd, humorous eyes. There was no resemblance to the Campbell Sutton he had grown to detest.

"I was going to tell you," Sutton cried, "I'll swear I was on the point of it a hundred times, old man."

"But you didn't."

"I lost my nerve. I've been nearly three years in Sing Sing, almost caught a score of times, and I sort of leaned on my fictitious brother. He gave me courage."

Trent looked at Sutton, and his face expressed concern.

"Your eye is discolored."

"Yes," Sutton agreed, "you have a wicked left. Think what would have happened if my nose had been genuine."

Trent sat down and rocked with laughter. He was relieved enormously to find Sutton safe when he had thought of him as one in constant dread of the police. And gone was the obstinate disinclination to work with Campbell Sutton. He took Sutton's hand in his own and shook it a half-minute.

"I've got to know all about it," he said. "I mean about the break from Sing Sing and your nasal transformation."

He forced Sutton into the chair the execrable Campbell had pre-empted and opened a new box of cigars.

"Ridgway, president of the Society for the Diminution of Diet, never had any difficulty in seeing me. I imagine he stood well with the authorities. I see you know about the part he played. It was a shameful assault in a way, but I didn't hurt him. I had studied him for a long time. I knew how he walked and talked. I went up the steep hill to Ossining and took in a matinee at a moving picture house. There was a man asleep next to me. I left Ridgway's hat and took his. I got out before he woke up; but it was already dusk, and I walked down to the river not ten blocks from the prison and took a boat and rowed over to the Jersey side. I exchanged Ridgway's clothes and the sleeper's hat for a sweater, khaki shirt and pants. Then I climbed on to the top of the Pallsades, and when morning broke I was in Fort Lee. I was near a moving picture studio. A number of extras were being engaged and I was assumed by a casting director to be one of the applicants. I got a pay check that night for five dollars, but it was worth a good bit more than that.

"There was an old fellow there who was making up. It looked wonderful to me. I got him to make me up. He said I had a bum nose, but that with a little putty he could make me look wonderful. He was building a character nose for himself, and I watched.

At First Natica Sutton Took Little Notice of Him.

I was an extra there for five days and when I left I had grease powder, spirit gum, liners and more than all—nose putty and cheek pads. I practiced in your bathroom."

"But how did you get in here?" Trent demanded.

"Your name was in the telephone directory. I tried the trick door but couldn't open it. As to getting in from the house in the next street, you'll remember that Devlin figured it out. I didn't think to have the luck to find gas, water and light on. I don't see why now."

"My housekeeper comes here three days a month to clean up. I had overlooked the ease with which the place could be entered. You'd better stay on here. I'll stock the place completely, so you needn't go out. I don't think even those night prowls are safe."

"Where will you be?"

"Getting acquainted with Payson Grant."

Sutton spoke apologetically.

"I played the part of my brother in rather a brutal fashion, I'm afraid. I questioned your knowledge of those top-notchers because I was genuinely surprised. And more than that, I was delighted because I saw an opening wedge which not even the most brilliant intellect or sophisticated charm could win alone. It has always been one of my great trials that my wife would not make the sort of a home I wanted. I'm fond of children, for example. I like to dine at home more often than I dine out. She'd rather a man be decadent than domestic. But I gave her a square deal as well as I knew how, and I saved Payson from prison."

"That interests me," Trent said. "I want facts to work on where he is concerned. What did he do?"

"I thought I had many good friends. I imagined they would instantly distinguish between the false tales he spread about me and the truth. I used to believe that a man's character would speak for him when he was miles away, or after he was dead." Sutton shook his head. "In my case, at all events, I was wrong. He spread the report that I had been cruel to her. Instead of disbelieving him they praised my wife for the brave face she had worn under my brutalities.

"When I first realized what Grant had done to me I was insane. I'm grateful to whatever it was prevented my being a murderer. That killing rage has gone, but don't think I've forgiven."

"How long did you save Payson Grant from prison?" Trent asked.

"After his brokerage firm failed I took him into the office more from friendship than belief in his ability. I was executor for the daughter of my old friend Mosby. There was a great deal of real estate to look after and an enormous amount of detail. I should have had to engage a clerk to attend to it. It was an opportunity to give Payson something to do and let him feel he was earning it."

It was another instance, Trent saw, of a man being punished for rare and kindly instincts. Sutton had done the thing delicately, generously, and had suffered. Trent began to chafe at the necessary delay before he could cross swords with the traitor.

"He stole a lot of my ward's money. I replaced it. Rather weakly, I believed in Payson's repentance. Your sentimentalism can always be led into folly of this sort. Pity with him is never contempt. Looking back on the thing I can see that Payson began to hate me when I refused to take him into partnership. He argued that if I really had forgiven him and forgotten his folly—he called it no more than that—I would take him into the firm. I had no children and no prospect of any. He began, by inference, to call me hard and miserly. He enlisted my wife on his side. I understand that he convinced her he could make two dollars grow where I had been content with one. In its ultimate analysis this mean that for every gorgeous gown I had bought her she could, had I been more capable, have bought two. For every one pearl, two pearls; and so on, ad infinitum."

"And of course you didn't go into the facts of the case and point out what a swine he was." There was temper in Trent's voice. "And I'll bet you didn't even let her know about those stolen dollars."

"He had my solemn word about that after I had forgiven him. I believed in that new leaf he turned over so ostentatiously."

"Look here," said Trent, after an interval of silence. "In the guise of an elder brother you threatened me. You said unless I undertook this thing you'd denounce me to the police. We must understand one another. Is that still your attitude?"

Sutton shook his head.

"No," he said slowly. "I've no right to enlist you in anything that may get you into jail. In France you atoned for whatever laws you broke. Do as you like; I'll never say a word."

Trent put his hand on the other man's shoulder affectionately.

"You know d-d well I'm going through with it."

CHAPTER IV

The Dread of the Uncaptured.

Payson Grant was one of those men in whom the seed of dishonesty might never have come to flower had not his desires outrun his fortune. He was born to the habit of spending money, and before the panic of 1907 he made enough for his wants. After a fruitless endeavor to make the ends meet his needs as a bond salesman, he went to his close friend, Frank Sutton, and obtained a position. At first Natica Sutton took little notice of him. His brilliant good looks were nullified by his lack of fortune. She had experienced sufficiently what lack of money meant in that year her father was striving to avert ruin.

Frank Sutton had been most generous. He had aided John Barstow to get out of the mess creditably, and bought him a small estate in Virginia where he could hunt and fish in freedom from catastrophes manufactured in Wall street. And with Sutton's increasing wealth she hankered after the laurels of the society hostess. Sutton's friends were mainly of the solid commercial classes who allowed their women to spend money, but themselves rebelled at dressing for dinner in their own homes.

It was not difficult for Payson Grant to comprehend Natica's dissatisfaction. He enlisted on her side when his gain as an ally seemed of little moment. He knew she would presently come to rely on him as her chief abettor in this struggle she was waging with her husband.

Lesson in Neatness Calculated to Last

"Hey! Pick up that cloth you used in wiping your shoes!" commanded sister of brother early the other evening.

"O, don't bother me. I'll be back later," he said as he hurried out of the house.

Time passed. Quite a bit of time passed ere he came home, and in the early hours of the morning he stumbled up the steps to the front door. A key was slipped into a keyhole; a door swung open silently; and just as silently he entered. He almost lost his balance when a rug managed to place itself in his way. He decided that he just would have to see where he was going, and thereupon did he turn on the lights in the reception hall.

There before him was a sign with the words: "A Big Surprise" and an arrow pointing the way up a flight of stairs. When he got to the top of the staircase another arrow pointed down a hall.

Upstairs and down, through rooms and halls, and finally an arrow pointed to the kitchen. He entered the kitchen and an arrow pointed to a closet. He opened the door to find the last sign of all: "Now, will you please pick up the cloth you used?"

He did.—Springfield Union.

Odd Wedding Custom

A smock marriage is a wedding at which the bride wears nothing but a smock or shift. Generations ago it was widely believed in New England that if a woman were married in this manner she was freed from liability for her past debts. In England it was supposed that the smock protected the bridegroom instead of the bride from creditors.—Pathfinder Magazine.

At the Movies

"I'm getting kinda tired of taking my children to the picture show in town," said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "They always get into a row with the Betts kids, and the Bettses usually lick 'em, and I have to fight Buck Betts, their dad. My kids generally tote rocks in their pockets and pour 'em to the young Bettses."

"Well, tuther night they took their rocks and broke up the show and durn' nigh broke up the Betts kids. Then Buck Betts came running with his gun. I in his hand and driv' me and my kids out of town. I'm getting sorter weary of the picture show, somehow."—Kansas City Star.

World's Great Writers

Found Work Laborious

On one occasion, John Ruskin was being interviewed by a reporter, who expressed his admiration of the seeming ease with which that great master of prose produced his books.

"My dear sir," said Ruskin, "you have no idea of the labor and pain it is to me to write. I will show you a great writer's work, who could write as easily—as you have just said—as the flow of water in a river." He thereupon produced the MS. of Scott's "Fortunes of Nigel," and continued. "Examine that; it is just as Scott wrote it, in his own clear, neat hand." Then he showed the interviewer the manuscript of one of his own works, which he had just finished. It was a mass of alterations and erasures—scarcely one sentence remaining as it was originally written.

Thus it has almost always been with the giants of literature. Carlyle's manuscript was the despair of the compositors, because of the manifold alterations and interpolations. Emerson is said to have often spent from six months to a year over the compositions of one or two short essays. His object was to condense his thoughts into the fewest possible words. Hawthorne "passed the day in writing stories, and the night in burning them"—so hypercritical was he regarding his own work.

R. L. Stevenson confessed to have rewritten whole chapters of one of his books as often as five or six times, and one chapter eight times himself, once by his wife—his wife's version being the second last.

Alphonse Daudet, in speaking of his method of work, said: "I write slowly, very slowly, and revise and revise. I am never satisfied with my work. My books go through many processes. To begin with, I fill my notebooks. Each note as it is used is scratched out in red or blue pencil. From these notes, and the tablet of my memory, I write out in copy books the first copy for my novel. I write this first copy on alternate pages of my copy book, and leave the opposite pages blank. When the book is finished in its rough state, I rewrite it page by page on the blank sheets. The page on the right is the amended copy of the page on the left. Then my wife looks at this second copy, and suggests to me what improvements might be made. I note these down. Then I rewrite the whole book again."—Weekly Scotsman.

Mother was entertaining a caller, when suddenly Dorothy, who had been playing on the floor, yawned prodigiously. "My, what a big yawn for such a little girl!" exclaimed the caller. "Yes," agreed Dorothy, "and the funny part is that I wasn't listening at all to what you were saying."

Happiness

Half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting and in being served by others. It consists in giving and in serving others.—Henry Drummond

Built Great Aqueduct

Archelaus built a splendid aqueduct to supply Jericho with water, some of the arches carrying it over valleys still existing in ruined condition.

Postmaster C. Andres announces that a ruling by the postal department permits a rural carrier to deliver outside of rural mail box ordinary parcels too large to be contained therein, provided the addressee has filed with the carrier or the postmaster written order for delivery in this manner.

If a patron has not requested by written order delivery of large parcels outside of his box, such parcels must not be delivered. Parcels must be considered too large for delivery in the box if they cannot be completely contained therein. They must not be left protruding partially from the box as they are then exposed to damage or depredation.

Patrons of rural routes should be advised that delivery of ordinary parcels too large to be contained in their mail boxes can be expedited if the patrons will provide the No. 2 box or a larger box complying with specifications or file written order requesting delivery outside of the box and agreeing to assume responsibility for damage or loss of parcels so delivered. Notwithstanding the written order referred to has been filed, carriers will of course, be expected to exercise their best judgment and avoid leaving parcels outside of mail boxes when the parcels are likely to be damaged by weather.

It Has Happened

A man is not always known by the company he associates with—as the company sometimes discovers to its cost.—Exchange.

"FIRE"

Fire is something everyone dreads. Your home, your keepsakes and perhaps everything you own is reduced to ashes. Poor electrical wiring is one of the greatest fire hazards. Most anyone can run a wire around the house and get a light, but how safe is it? From a standpoint of safety, no matter how expensive your building or how good it is built, it isn't worth much with poor wiring.

PIPE AND BX

Here are some of the methods of wiring buildings for electricity: Rigid Conduit (Pipe) Armored Cable (BX) and knob and tube (open wiring). All of these methods of wiring will give results, but pipe or Bx are far the best. Open wiring should be a thing of the past because in most cases it is unsafe.

There are two kinds of pipe, black and galvanized. We use only galvanized pipe which will give many more years of service. In all our work we endeavor to build for permanence, not just to last a year or two.

Having your buildings wired in pipe or Bx does not necessarily mean that they are wired good or that they are safe.

GOOD WIRING

A good electrical wiring job is one that is done in either Pipe or Bx cable, or a combination of both, by good electricians that not only know how to do electrical wiring but are conscientious about their work and see that you get the best possible.

You will be surprised to learn that many of the homes we have done repair work in, have shoddy wiring, that has been done by workers that either did not know their business or else they took the job on a price basis and forgot all about quality and good workmanship.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

You cannot hire a good workman for cheap pay, neither can you buy high grade material at cheap prices. Your Electrical wiring job should be let on a basis of not how cheap but how good.

You soon forget the price but if you get a poor job it will linger with you.

We aim to do good work at a reasonable price. Give us a trial. An estimate will cost you nothing nor obligate you in any way

TOOLS

A good workman must have good tools to do good work. We have complete electrical equipment that enables us to put in a simple wall plug or string up a line of poles. We are established in business and are responsible contractors. We do not come to your door with a handful of tools, do your work and then skip the community.

We are here to stay. We are building our business on a basis of fair dealing and if you have any work to be done we shall be pleased to serve you in that capacity.
